VAASTU

The Vaastu Shastras have offered many benefits to the user of a built space.

These benefits are always connected to the meaning and reasons behind the living practices of people. In general, these include design and strategies to find harmony and well-being. By embracing the principles of Vaastu, these benefits can be ensured. The atmospheric spaces within a built form capture the power and capability to enrich the lives of the occupants in every way. This does not mean that Vaastu is a magical way of getting things done without any effort. Certain liberties and authorities can be built that would offer well-being and prosperity to the life of the users. The process of calculating and incorporating the required benefits in the design is called Avasthita. Avasthita literally means "measuring and aligning".

It is a science that is based on the principles of health, wealth, happiness, harmony and prosperity. The calculation is carried out to achieve total well-being and prosperity in all the daily endeavored ways.

Today, there are market forces pushing only monetary benefits and demanding regional profit margin calculation in Ayastu. It is well known even in modern management strategies that disproportionately high profits create other problems either health wise or in human interactions. Therefore the calculation would be aimed at the following: To create well-being, To balance monetary income and expense so that there is no loss, To achieve work excellence.

To effect an aura of well-being, contentment and spiritual satisfaction in the built space. To enhance learning and curiosity. To allow for growth and prosperity.
